

Players' Code Of Conduct

As a Player for a Mid-Isle Soccer Club (MSC) team, I understand that I am a representative of my Club and my Home Town, and will conduct myself appropriately. I confirm that I have read and will seek to respect the following expectations:

- The Mid-Isle Soccer Club (MSC) supports a sports environment that is free from drugs, tobacco and alcohol. As a player I will respect that when attending MSC events. As a youth player that wants to excel and be dedicated to this team, I will respect that at all times.
- Players are responsible for the effort they give at training. Players must attend training unless sick or injured. Players must make good decisions when it comes to their personal health, sleep and nutrition. Coaches will make decisions based on the decisions made by players.
- Players should encourage their teammates. Negative comments will not be tolerated.
- If a player has questions about their play or role on the team, they should discuss those issues with a coach between games. Players should report any team issues (such as bullying or negativity towards themselves or any other players) to a coach as soon as they arise. Any form of 'hazing' or 'initiation' activities will result in suspension.
- Players must not criticize game officials and opposing parents or players during or after games as well as refraining from using abusive language. Players should be fully knowledgeable of the rules of the game.
- While parents are responsible for ensuring that players are at the field at the stated time, it is the player's responsibility to be ready to go and to be prepared to train or play when they get to the field. Players must come prepared with gear and water for every training session or game.
- Players must notify their parents and coaches of any injuries that they sustain and provide honest updates on their condition. Players must follow a doctor's orders and should work hard to rehabilitate the injury to the best of their ability.
- Players must maintain a focus on schoolwork and on being part of this team, in addition to any other activities they are involved with. It is the player's responsibility to maintain expected levels of achievement. Players who cannot achieve these expectations or who miss training or games as a result may be moved to a reserve role on the team.
- Players should ensure that they understand what is being taught during training and what their role is during games. They should constantly seek to implement what is taught in training. Players should not be afraid to make mistakes doing so.
